

OCEAN FOODCHAINS

Our oceans exist in a delicate balance, where each living thing relies on everything else. What do you think will happen when parts of the food chain are affected?

If pollution in the ocean reduces the number of zooplankton in the area, what will the effect be on the other animals in the food chain?

If the small fish consume large amounts of microplastics, what effect could this have on the food chain as a whole?

